Efficacy of intra-operative blood salvage and autotransfusion in knee arthroplasty. Meticulous restoration of intra-operative blood volume and haemodynamics is becoming increasingly important in orthopaedic surgery. A prospective study was performed on 91 patients undergoing total knee arthroplasty to assess the efficacy of intra-operative autologous blood salvage (ABS) with a view to reducing the need for homologous blood transfusion. ABS was instituted pre-operatively and continued intra-operatively in all patients. Pre-operative autologous blood was collected in the operation room (OPR) by a series of methods including the standard bagging of the femoral vein. For the intra-operative period, ABS was instituted by simultaneous syringe infusion of crystalloid and bleeding through the autotransfusion system. Following the completion of the operation, all blood obtained through ABS was returned to the patient. The haemoglobin levels in the ABS circuit and on the day of discharge were also measured. The median volume of blood salvaged and returned to the patient was 3.9 litres. No patients required homologous blood transfusion. The post-operative drop in haemoglobin levels was 1.8 g/dl on the day of discharge. There were no complications reported from the use of ABS. This study demonstrates that pre-operative and intra-operative ABS is effective in reducing the need for homologous blood transfusion in knee arthroplasty.

Four baseball traditions that will never be repeated Today in 1890, the first baseball game of the season was played in the City of Brooklyn, New York. This game was very unlike today's game. The bases were very far apart, and the rules were rather loose. The players didn't wear baseballs - they wore unshaved faces, baggy pants, and football-style jerseys. At the time, these players were seen as American version of horse and carriage drivers. After this initial game, it was decided by Brooklyn edd6d56e20
